EXECUTIVE ORDER

The following is promulgated for the purpose of defining in permanent form certain general duties of the Secretary to the President, in addition to such special duties as may be assigned him from time to time by the President; and the scope of the control to be exercised by him in the White House and the Executive Offices:

The Secretary to the President shall have supervision and control of the ushers, doorkeepers and police officers stationed in and about the White House, the Executive Office, and the grounds. He shall also have general supervision of the work of the steward; and he shall exercise supervision over the arrangements for all public functions at the White House.

He shall have supervision of the Executive Office, including its clerical work and its correspondence by mail, cable, telegraph, telephone, messenger or other means; and all persons engaged in the performance of any duty immediately connected with or incident to the work of the Executive Office shall be under his direction and subject to his orders. He shall organize the office in such manner as may seem to him best suited to the transaction of its business and shall make such changes in its organization from time to time as in his opinion are necessary or advisable.

He shall have a general supervision of the White House stables; and of the work of all persons employed in connection therewith.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

WHITE HOUSE,

December 8, 1902.

194-A