1795

Executive Order.

James D. Calhoun may be appointed deputy collector of customs at the Port of Tampa, in the District of Florida, in the State of Florida, under the reorganization of the Customs Service which becomes effective July 1st, 1913, without compliance with the civil service rules.

The Civil Service Commission concurs with the Secretary of the Treasury in recommending the issuance of this order. The Collector is required to spend the larger part of his time at Jacksonville, the designated headquarters, and it is necessary to put deputies in charge of the other ports in the State. The Secretary of the Treasury states that he is not satisfied that any of the deputies in Florida are sufficiently competent to be entrusted with the management of the important port of Tampa where the collections amount to $1,867,763.84 per annum, which is more than three times that of the next largest port in the State.

A number of temporary appointments have been made in the Florida collection district without examination because of the lack of eligibles. The number of eligibles in that district for positions of this character has been insufficient, both in number and in the grades obtained in examination, to meet the needs of the service.
