Executive Order

I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, under the authority conferred by "An Act authorizing the President to co-ordinate or consolidate executive bureaus, agencies, and offices, and for other purposes in the interest of economy and the more efficient concentration of the Government", approved May 20, 1918, do hereby order and direct:

1. That whenever in his judgment it becomes expedient, the Chairman or the Vice Chairman of the War Trade Board, at his discretion, shall relinquish and transfer to the Department of State by definitive command all, or any integral part of the duties, powers, and functions of the War Trade Board and its records and public property pertaining to its offices, agents, employees, and representatives outside of the Continental limits of the United States, including the members and personnel appertaining to the duties, powers, and functions above mentioned and also the members and personnel of the Peace Commission now at Paris, accredited by the War Trade Board.

2. All the salaries and expenses of such administration and all outstanding liabilities of the War Trade Board arising out of matters and things so relinquished and transferred shall be paid by the Department of State out of any available funds; and approval is hereby given to any such transfers of administration and consequent assumption of liabilities as may heretofore have taken place by the mutual consent of the War Trade Board and the Department of State.

WOODROW WILSON

THE WHITE HOUSE,
3 March 1919.
